restorday, at noon, to hear the report of the Committee appointed to raise assistance for the Portland sufferers. There was a full attendance of members. Mr. S. B. Chittenden presided. The proceedings were commenced by a resolution offered by A. A. Low, eag., thanking the press for their action in reference to the matter of raising funds.

The Chairman then said that the Committee bad read, with regret, in the editorial column of The New-York Times, an article reflecting upon the generosity of the city of New-York.
The journal in question had stated that, in one night, $50,000 had been raised for the Portiant sufferers in Montreal, while no such appointments generosity that been exhibited here. The

Before reaching his readdence I was obliged to climb three rows of batricades of square paving stones, from behind which the insurgents had been firing throughout the formoon. The last of these baginesses was almost under the very windows of the Legation, and I found that the street had been one is the most exciting and lively localities of the day.

A gentleman subsequently informed me that from his prindow he had looked down upon the meas engaged behind these barricades, and had seen the moment. One of them boasted of a double-barreled gun, which he rapidly localed with small brid-shot, and raked the street, to the infinite detriment of friend or foe who happened to look sut of a door or window within range of his weapon, but writhout promoting by his crary operations the success of the rebellious movement. Finding the family of an simbassador safe and well, and in as comfortable a frame of mind as the circumstances would admit of, I started on Bry return to the hotel. Turning out of the Calle de Barquillo and into the Alcala, in front of the barracks located on the latter street, the cry of "a los amans" was ruised among the soldiers then resting there from the severe labor of the day, and looking up the street I saw squads of soldiers hidting behind int screet-corners and in the doorways, with their moskets at a "present," gearly to receive an expected foe down the "Calle del Caballero de Gracia" leading diagonally into the Alcala. Mr. James Brady should speak but to the moral grounds of two case. What had been said by the counsel reminded him a little of two circumstances, the first of the Mississippi can items who having possessed himself of four acce, remarked on the production of a fifth, that there was cheating around the board; and the other, the English highwayman who brought an action for the division of the spoils. Mr. Brady through an action for the division of the spoils. Mr. Brady then care a short sketch of the plan of the Government, under which Mr. Allen acted, for the arrest of bounty jumpers, This, he claumed rendered the defendants quasi officers of the Government and it was not to be expected that they would do this without compensation. Mr. Brady defended the District Attorogy in New Jersey. Mr. Stanton had issued the District Attorogy in New Jersey. Mr. Stanton had issued that they that these credits would be allowed. Mr. Brady discussed at some length the trial in New Jersey, claiming that these credits would be allowed. Mr. Brady discussed at some length the trial in New Jersey, claiming that the very question raised by Mr. Smith had been fully discussed in it by Mr. Smith had been fully discussed in it by Mr. Smith had been fully discussed in it by Mr. Santon had been fully discussed in the trial in New Jersey, claiming that the very question raised by Mr. Allen, it was either his or it was paid to him in trust to procure henselver the more was complete.
